A Night With Warren Washington is a groundbreaking public television interview taped before a live audience at the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) Auditorium in Washington, D.C. Interviewed by the President of the NAS, Dr. Ralph Cicerone, Dr. Washington explores his family’s African American history, developing atmospheric climate models, and advising Presidents to his being awarded the National Medal of Science by President Barack Obama in 2010.

Wednesday, 13 March 2013
3:00pm
NCAR, Mesa Lab, Main Seminar Room

Reception with light refreshments will follow

This seminar will not be webcast